What is the Japanese-Language Proficiency Test?

The JLPT is a test for non-native speakers of Japanese who wish to obtain a score that reflects their Japanese-language proficiency. The test is conducted twice a year in Japan and various locations overseas.

The JLPT was first held in 1981. While the number of participants has risen to many as 1,700,000 in 86 countries and areas around the world, it is currently the largest Japanese-language test in the world.

1. Administrative Organizations

Outside Japan, the Japan Foundation administers the test in cooperation with local host institutions. (In Taiwan, the Japan Association and Japan - Taiwan Exchange Association jointly administer the test). The Japan International Educational Exchanges and Services administers the test.

2. Test Dates

In 2019, the tests will be conducted on Sunday, July 7 and Sunday, December 1.

4. Decision of Pass or Fail

To pass, the total score needs to be 60 or above on the overall test and (2) the score in each scoring section needs to be 30 or above. If the score for one scoring section is below the sectional pass mark, the examinee fails the test, regardless of the total score. If the examinee fails the test, they will not receive scores for any section, including any sections which the examinee completes.

* All scores are scaled scores. Please see the Official Worldwide JLPT website (www.jlpt.jp) for details of scaled scores.

All examinees will be issued a “Certificate of Result and Scores.” Successful examinees will also be issued a “Certificate of Japanese-Language Proficiency.” To examinees outside Japan, “Certificate of Result and Scores” will be issued via the local host institutions. Examinees will receive their “Certificate of Result and Scores” for the July test in early October and for the December test in early March. Moreover, the test results will be available on the Internet for the July test in late August and in late January for the December test.
